INTRODUCTION

The official records of twentieth-century historical events are voluminous and have been preserved by institutions in quantities matched by none of the preceding eras. These vast archival resources are beginning to be exploited by historians and critical commentators on all the facets of human endeavour and will provide the basis of whatever historical perspective scholars of the future will be able to bring to bear on our own time. By themselves, however, these records are not enough: the unofficial observations and reflections of perceptive independent observers are required to provide both information and critical balance. The University of Toronto Library, dedicated as it is to providing research collections for the academic community of today and of the future, is privileged to house and administer the Mark Gayn Collection, one of the most extensive and important collections of its kind.

This collection is significant for its scope, its depth, and its focus, encompassing several of the most tumultuous political and social upheavals of our age. Its potential for any scholar interested in the modern history of China, Japan, the U.S.S.R., Vietnam, Greece or Czechoslovakia is vast, but before it can be fully exploited it must be described in sufficient detail to be understood and used. The Thomas Fisher Rare Book Library was fortunate to secure the expert services of Graham Bradshaw to catalogue and describe the manuscript notebooks, diaries, drafts of books and articles, tapes, films and photographs and compile this detailed description of the collection.

The acquisition and description of the Mark Gayn Collection is the result of cooperation, enlightened generosity and concern for the preservation of cultural history. Mark and Suzanne Gayn arranged for the donation to the University of Toronto before his death in December, 1981 and Suzanne has been consistently generous and helpful. The University and generations of scholars owe her special gratitude. The Atkinson Foundation through its President, Mrs. H.A. Hindmarsh, provided a substantial grant for the Library to sort, arrange and describe the collection and this publication is one result of its crucial assistance to this project.

William Saywell, now the President of Simon Fraser University, was instrumental in arranging for the collection to come to the University of Toronto and has kindly contributed a foreword, written from the perspective of a personal friend of Mark Gayn.

This catalogue is, of course, a small monument to the remarkable career of Mark Gayn. It is an attempt to ensure that his achievements will continue to be sources of information and inspiration to all who would attempt to comprehend and understand our civilization.

FOREWORD

Mark Gayn's extraordinary life as one of North America's best known and most accomplished journalists spanned five decades. He observed many of this century's tumultuous events from the 1930s to his death in 1981. The breadth of his interests was almost limitless, from politics and economics to culture and the arts. Above all, he was an outstanding observer and analyst of the great human dramas that unfolded in the century. He met and interviewed many of the famous and the infamous behind those dramas. In recording their views, portraying their actions and analysing the consequences, Mark Gayn not only recorded history in the making; he made history as well.

I had the very good fortune to know Mark as a fellow "China-Watcher" and as a personal friend. In the 1970s we both lived and worked in Hong Kong. As the Cultural Revolution tore China apart and its violence spilled over into the British Territory, I was able to observe events at very close hand and discuss their historic importance with Mark. The historical perspective and cultural sensitivity Mark brought to all his writings on China singled him out as an unique observer of Chinese affairs.

I am very pleased that Mark and his wife Suzanne agreed to give the extremely valuable collection of his papers and library to the University of Toronto, whose Robarts Library is the pre-eminent university library in Canada. Mark's long association with the Toronto Star, and the many friends that he and Suzanne have throughout both the city and the University, make it particularly fitting that this part of his exceptional legacy should be housed at the University of Toronto.

The Mark Gayn Collection will be used for decades to come by the historians, journalists and social scientists who will continue to write on the events and issues it encompasses. His notebooks, diaries and correspondence will provide important new information and perspectives on the Chinese Revolution, the American occupation of Japan, the Greek Civil War, major developments in the Cold War in Asia and Europe, and a host of other historic events of this century. His published and unpublished manuscripts will strengthen the archival resources for those who will interpret and re-interpret the history of much of this century. His newspaper despatches and articles should be read with care by all those who would attempt to follow his footsteps in a profession he loved, and one to which he gave so very much.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Mark Gayn papers are an extremely interesting and valuable record of a journalist's career which covered some fifty years. They contain not only the journalistic output of Mark Gayn (his writings, broadcasts, lectures, etc.), but also the research materials he used in his work, and an assortment of memorabilia brought back from numerous assignments.

Much of this very large collection, when received, was arranged in broad subject categories. For example, Gayn grouped many of his lectures together and organized his research material along geographical lines. In order to make the collection more accessible and useful to the researcher, it was necessary to revise the organization considerably. More specific subject headings have been created and similar materials have been grouped into series. The notebooks, for example, were originally divided geographically but were scattered throughout the collection in no particular order. They have now been brought together into one series but the geographical arrangements have been retained. The biographical and personal items which have been brought together to form one series, provide another example of material found throughout the collection.

The Mark Gayn papers as a whole have been divided into twenty series or main categories, as follows: Biographical and Personal, Correspondence, Diaries, Notebooks, Subject Files, Lectures, Conferences and Seminars, Books, Articles, Book Reviews, Translations, Literary Agent Activities, Broadcast Media, Audio-Visual Recordings, Press and Information Kits, Posters, Ephemera, Artifacts, Material from Suzanne Gayn, Philip Jaffe, and Bertram Wolfe, and Photographs (for a description of the contents for the series, see the statements preceding each series). One of the main features of this collection is its interesting diversity in terms of scope, physical format and places of origin. It includes both manuscript and printed materials, the latter consisting of articles, pamphlets, reports, books, ephemera and posters. The collection also contains cassette tapes, phonodiscs, 16mm. films, photographs and artifacts. Records from China, the U.S.S.R. and North Korea, posters from Vietnam and Cuba, and dolls from Communist China dressed in military uniforms are but a few examples of the wide variety of items that Gayn acquired.

Of all this material the most noteworthy from a research point of view are the notebooks, diaries, tapes of interviews, and photographs. More specifically, the information these categories provide on China and Japan is especially important. With respect to China the following types of material are of particular importance: photographs from the 1930s to the 1980s, notebooks, diaries and tapes of interviews. In addition, the large quantity of Chinese ephemera, artifacts and posters produced during the Cultural Revolution is a unique element of this collection. In the case of Japan, the notebooks and diaries for the immediate post-war period and for the 1970s and early 1980s are most significant, as are the tapes of the interviews with Japanese leaders. It should be noted that much of this material pertains directly to the books Gayn wrote on Japan, Japan Diary (1948), and Shin Nippon Nikki (New Japan Diary) (1982). It will be evident from the foregoing remarks on the strengths of the collection that information on a given subject may be found in several series. For example Russian material is located in at least ten series including Series 4, 5, 6, 9, 13, 16 and 17.

One segment of the Mark Gayn papers not previously mentioned but of considerable interest is the book collection which represents a portion of his personal library. This includes copies of the books written by Gayn, as well as those in which his articles appeared. Books, pamphlets and serials acquired by Gayn are also part of the collection. Especially interesting are the Chinese books from the 1940s, 1960s and 1970s.

Further Mark Gayn material may be found in the Butler Library at Columbia University in the Curtis Brown Ltd. papers, Boxes 152 and 827, and the Random House papers, Box 1032.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Mark Julius Gayn (né Ginsbourg), one of Canada's foremost journalists, was born April 21, 1909, of Russian-Jewish parents, at Barim, a tiny railway station near the Manchurian-Mongolian border. His father was in the timber business, managing lumber concessions and sawmills in a variety of locations throughout the Far East. His mother, an intelligent, cultured woman, was a dentist who had graduated with honours when already a mother of three.

Gayn's early life, recounted in his autobiography, Journey From The East, was very much a pioneer existence, providing him and his two younger brothers with excitement and adventure. The nature of their father's occupation meant that the family was forced to move many times. As a result, Gayn received much of his early education from tutors and governesses. Later, he went to Chinese, Russian and English schools. It was while attending the public school in Harbin, at the age of thirteen, that Gayn found his true love, journalism.¹

In 1923, the family moved to Vladivostok, which had recently been taken over by the Bolsheviks. Here he sold his first two news items to a local newspaper, Krasnoe Znamia (Red Banner). One was a review of a novel, the other a report on the city's volleyball team. He was also enrolled in a Soviet public school where for the first time he was exposed to Marxist teaching and communist propaganda.

In 1926, the family moved once again, this time to Shanghai where Gayn continued his education at an English school. He became friendly with a group of young Chinese nationalists and often acted as their messenger, carrying proscribed newsletters and anti-imperialist leaflets for them.

In the spring of 1929, Gayn applied to Pomona College in Claremont, California. He was accepted and in the fall of that year left China for the United States. He majored in political science and was also very active on the college newspaper, Student Life, eventually becoming editor-in-chief. In 1933, Gayn graduated magna cum laude and that fall entered the School of Journalism at Columbia University after receiving a Pulitzer travelling scholarship.

Upon graduation from Columbia University in 1934, Gayn returned to Shanghai as a special correspondent for the Washington Post. In addition, he accepted a position as an editor in the English section of the Japanese Rengo News Agency, later renamed Domei Tsushin-sha. With the outbreak of war between Japan and China in 1937, Gayn resigned his position with Domei and went to work as city editor (later news editor) of Shanghai's American-run daily, the China Press, which was noted for its strong anti-Japanese stance. Because many of his articles were opposed to Japanese actions in China, Gayn often resorted to the use of pseudonyms such as Alfred Lusk and Aurelius to protect himself. Gayn also wrote unsigned articles and editorials for John B. Powell's China Weekly Review.

Shortly after the outbreak of the Second World War in Europe, Gayn returned to the United States. It was at this point that he changed his name from Ginsbourg to Gayn in order to prevent Japanese reprisals against his youngest brother, Sam, who remained in Shanghai.² Gayn's first year in the United States was spent in New York working on his book, The Fight For The Pacific, and writing articles for various newspapers.

In the fall of 1940, Gayn joined the staff of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. That same year he married Julia Rubinraut, whom he had known in Shanghai. She died a year later. His second wife, Sally Waldman, was introduced to him by his publisher. At the end of 1941, he became a contributing editor at Newsweek, and for a brief period in 1944 worked for Time in the same capacity.

Early in 1945, Gayn was hired by the Chicago Sun as chief of its projected Moscow bureau, a position he never filled because the Soviet government refused him a visa. While waiting for the Russian decision, Gayn remained in New York writing for the Sun, as well as for other publications such as The Saturday Evening Post and Collier's. In June of that year, however, Gayn was arrested by the FBI along with five others, including Philip Jaffe, editor of the journal Amerasia, on charges of illegally procuring and publishing secret government information. In the resulting "Amerasia case", the Grand Jury refused to indict Gayn, and all the charges were dropped.

At the end of November 1945, Gayn was sent to Tokyo by the Chicago Sun as its bureau chief for Japan and Korea, a position he held until early 1947, when the paper dissolved its foreign news syndicate. During his assignment in Japan, Gayn wrote critical reports on the policies of the United States military government under General Douglas MacArthur, covered the first democratic elections held since the surrender, and examined the implementation of land reform in the countryside. He also reported on events in Korea, making a trip to that country in October 1946.

In the early months of 1947, Gayn was sent by the tabloid PM Daily to China, where he was able to interview several leaders of the Communist Party in their mountain stronghold at Yen-an. These leaders included Mao Tse-tung, Chou En-lai, Liu Shao-chi and Chu Teh.

Upon his return to New York in mid-1947, Gayn wrote a book based on his experiences in Japan and Korea entitled Japan Diary, which became a bestseller. The following May, Gayn travelled to Europe, accredited by several publications including The Star Weekly (Toronto) and the New York Star. He was also commissioned by his publisher to write a book on Europe entitled Europe Today which, however, he did not complete.

With Paris as his base, Gayn spent the next four years travelling throughout Europe, including eighteen months behind the Iron Curtain. Among the stories he covered were the anti-Communist campaigns in the Grammos Mountains of Greece and the show trials in Bulgaria and Hungary. His articles appeared in the London Daily Telegraph, the New Republic and, under the byline Thomas Ballard, in Le Monde. While in Hungary, Gayn met Suzanne Lengvary, an actress whom he married in 1950, his wife Sally having died two years previously. In order to protect Suzanne's relatives in Budapest from possible reprisals, Gayn used the name of Ballard when writing on Communist matters.

Gayn returned to the United States at the end of 1952 and the following year he and his wife emigrated to Canada. During the 1950s, Gayn wrote articles and book reviews for a number of publications including The Star Weekly, The Nation and the Japanese newspaper, Yomiuri. In 1959, he joined the staff of the Toronto Daily Star as its eastern affairs expert and editorial writer. During his twenty-two years as a Star reporter, Gayn made frequent trips to the U.S.S.R. and several visits to China. His return to China in the spring of 1965, his first visit since 1947, resulted in a series of articles which appeared in many leading newspapers including The New York Times. In addition, he received a large number of offers from American publishers to write a book on China, which unfortunately he never completed.

Between 1966 and 1972, Gayn was stationed in Hong Kong as the chief of the Star's Asia bureau. He covered events in China and other parts of Asia, particularly the Cultural Revolution, the war in Vietnam, and the creation of Bangladesh. During this period Gayn's columns were syndicated in the United States by the Chicago Daily News. Before his return to Canada in 1972, Gayn was one of four correspondents allowed to visit North Korea.

From 1972 until 1981, Gayn was based in Toronto, but his extended trips abroad (Europe, Asia, the Middle East and South America) continued. In 1980, he retraced the steps of Marco Polo along the ancient Silk Road trade route through the Gobi Desert. Gayn also visited Japan twice that year to conduct interviews and gather material for his final book, Shin Nippon Nikki (New Japan Diary).

Wherever he travelled, Gayn's powers of observation and interviewing ability were reflected in the articles that resulted from his meetings with political leaders, economic planners, businessmen, scientists, and rebels. Gayn earned a reputation as one of the world's most knowledgeable and reliable commentators on Asian and Soviet bloc affairs. From his earliest days as a correspondent, whether in the field covering a war or behind a desk preparing to file a story, Gayn was a tireless writer. For five decades Gayn's insightful reporting resulted in news dispatches, interviews, and columns that appeared in leading journals and newspapers including The New York Times Magazine, Foreign Affairs, Bungei Shunjū, the Washington Post, Le Monde and Yomiuri. Gayn also wrote several books on Asia including his sequel to Japan Diary. This appeared posthumously in Japanese translation in 1982 under the title Shin Nippon Nikki (New Japan Diary).

Gayn was not only a journalist, but also a frequent commentator for CBC Radio. He wrote and narrated a thirteen-part series entitled "A View From Red Square". He also appeared on television both in Canada and the United States including an ABC documentary in 1966 called "Red China: Year of the Gun?" Greatly in demand as a speaker on current world affairs, he lectured in North America before a wide range of audiences.

Mark Gayn died in Toronto on December 17, 1981. After his death, his extensive research collection was given to the University of Toronto Library.

SERIES 2: CORRESPONDENCE

The Correspondence files have been divided into three categories:

1. Family - correspondence to or from members of Mark Gayn's family, arranged alphabetically.
2. Author - correspondence of interesting or important individuals and organizations arranged alphabetically.
3. Chronological - correspondence of a general nature arranged by year.

Correspondence relating to specific subjects will be found in the appropriate series. For example, correspondence dealing with Mark Gayn's book, Japan Diary, has been placed in Series 8: Books. Correspondence accompanying magazine articles has been kept with the articles.

SERIES 3: DIARIES

One of the methods used by Mark Gayn to record impressions, interviews and events was by keeping a diary. Most often the "diary" took the form of typewritten notes; occasionally, however, it became letters sent to his wife (see 97:33-35, 98:1-3).

The diaries have been arranged alphabetically by continent or country, and chronologically within this.

The European diaries 1948-1952, were to form the basis of a never written book entitled "Europe Today" (see also 107:2). Because the Japanese diaries constituted research for the book Japan Diary, they have been placed in Series 8: Books (98:4-10).

SERIES 4: NOTEBOOKS

In addition to his diaries, Mark Gayn kept detailed notebooks recording interviews with political leaders, businessmen and community figures, as well as describing places visited.

The notebooks have been arranged alphabetically by continent or country, and chronologically within this. An exception has been made for the first two notebooks (8:43-44) which are arranged by date and are substantially different from the others in that they contain drafts of articles, book reviews and letters as well as interviews.

The China and Japan notebooks dated 1946-47 have been arranged according to Mark Gayn's own system of numbering hence the discrepancy in the sequence. One Japan notebook (40:6) is largely in an unidentified hand.

SERIES 5: SUBJECT FILES

Mark Gayn kept extensive research files on numerous countries, people and subjects. They included magazine and newspaper clippings, government reports, embassy press releases and political documents. The contents of this series are representative of Gayn's original files.

In order to make the files more accessible, they have been divided into two categories:

1. Geographical - arranged alphabetically by continent and subdivided by country.
2. Subject - arranged alphabetically.

The term "Notes" refers to Mark Gayn's own writings. These have been placed in the first folder(s) within a given country.

SERIES 8: BOOKS

Mark Gayn wrote seven books, all dealing with the Far East. Only five of these books, namely those for which manuscript and research material is available, are included in this series. The other two, Japan's War on Foreign Business in China and Japan's War in China are located in the book collection as are copies of his other books. It should be noted that the last two mentioned books were published anonymously. However, Gayn himself states in his autobiography, Journey From The East, that he wrote Japan's War on Foreign Business in China. Based on known circumstances, authorship of the second book, Japan's War in China, has been attributed to him.

Because Gayn also worked on several books which were never published, the series has been divided into two sections:

1. Published - arranged by date of publication. His last book, Shin Nippon Nikki (New Japan Diary), was published posthumously in Japan in 1982.
2. Projected and Unpublished - arranged by the date(s) written. In some instances it was not possible to determine exact dates. "Europe Today" was to be based on diaries kept by Gayn during his assignment in Europe, 1948-1952. These have been placed in Series 3 Diaries (see 7:9-24, 8:1-40).

SERIES 9: ARTICLES

Mark Gayn was a prolific writer whose articles appeared in a great variety of magazines and newspapers. The articles have been divided in the following manner:

1. World Book Year Book - short articles on Asian countries and longer essays called "Special Reports". They have been arranged by date of appearance and alphabetically by country within this.
2. Book and Magazine - articles appearing in books and magazines arranged by publication date (excludes those mentioned elsewhere in the series). It also includes articles sent to specific publications, but which may not have been published. These have been interfiled with the other articles. Boxes 122 and 123 contain copies of magazines in which Gayn's articles appeared.
3. The Star Weekly - for over twenty years Mark Gayn contributed articles to the weekend magazine section (later a separate magazine) of the Toronto Daily Star. The articles have been arranged by date of publication.
4. The Nation - the articles are arranged by publication date. There are also articles sent to The Nation, whose fate is unknown. These are interfiled with the published articles by date sent. For book reviews appearing in The Nation see Series 10.
5. International Wildlife - the articles are arranged by publication date. Note that the first article (130:3) was not written by Mark Gayn. He provided research material for the article and was mentioned in it.
6. Newspaper - this contains articles (in mss or tss) written for various publications including the Toronto Star, Chicago Sun, Le Monde, The New York Times etc. Often the articles took the form of cables sent by Gayn while on assignment. They have been arranged, wherever possible, by date of publication; otherwise, by date sent or approximate date.

A subsection of this section is newspaper clippings which consists of the clippings of Gayn's articles, arranged by date of publication. This has been divided into three groups: (1) clippings (2) scrapbooks containing clippings (3) Japanese newspaper clippings
7. Miscellaneous - in some instances it was not possible to determine the type of article (e.g. newspaper, magazine) or whether or not it was published. These articles have been arranged by approximate date.

It should be noted that Mark Gayn wrote under pseudonyms such as Thomas Ballard and Alfred Lusk. In two instances (125:10, 16) articles have been written under the name A. Demir. However, it has not been possible to identify these positively as the work of Mark Gayn.

SERIES 10: BOOK REVIEWS

This series lists book reviews by Mark Gayn which appeared in various publications including newspapers and magazines. The reviews are arranged by date of publication.

In some instances it was not possible to determine whether a given review was published. These reviews have been arranged by date or approximate date sent to the publication and interfiled with the others.

For notebooks containing drafts of book reviews see 8:43-44.

SERIES 14: AUDIO-VISUAL RECORDINGS

This series has been divided into three groups:

1. Cassette Tapes - consists of two sections: (1) broadcasts, lectures, etc. by Mark Gayn. (2) interviews, press conferences, special events. This second section includes interviews Gayn conducted. It also contains interviews for his Japanese television programme, "Japan Diary '70", and for his last book, Shin Nippon Nikki (New Japan Diary). The tapes have been arranged in chronological order.
2. Phonodiscs - commercial recordings acquired by Mark Gayn including songs, operas, instrumentals and speeches by Lenin, Mao Tse-tung and others. These have been arranged by country and within this alphabetically by title. The English title will be found in square brackets or following the equal signs. The North Korean records lack titles so they have been arranged alphabetically by the name of the first song on the first side. In two instances the first songs are the same; however the records are not identical.
3. Films - divided into two sections: (1) documentaries by or on Mark Gayn, or in which he appears (2) miscellaneous films consisting primarily of "home movies". Two exceptions are Reels 20 and 22. The films are arranged by date or approximate date.
